

THE DOG THAT LOST ITS SPOTS

One Spring day Stella's dog gave birth to six little puppies. Stella loved them all but couldn't keep all of them

It was difficult to choose but in end she kept Home

Whenever she took him out everybody admired him and wanted to caress him. He knew he was very pretty but he got angry when they fondled him

One morning when a little girl tried to caress him, Homer started growling at her and barking. To calm him down Stella took him to the park.

There he met his friends but denied to play with them as he thought of himself an aristocrat. He lied down by stella and in a while he left his eyes closing.

suddenly a spot popped out of his snout and after a while he had lost all the spots of his head. He tried to solve the problem but in vain. He was so ashamed that decided to remain at home and never go out.

Until one day after a long time, he thought of going out to the garden. Then a strong wind blew and took away all the spots from his body. He heard his friends laughing and making fun of him. They didn't consider him a friend any more.

Homer tried to change their mind but he didn't manage it. But it was then that he heard Stella's voice. All these were just a dream! He woke up and was still at the park. He realized he was mistaken and went to apologize to his friends. They forgave him and continued playing all together again. At last Homer found his friends and the sun in his life again!